THE UTES QUIET.

Crook Reports His Mission Successfully Accomplished.

Reservation Made for a Post on the Border.

Canada Threatened With a Formidable Uprising.

The Powerful Blackfeet Likely to Make Trouble.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON, September 6.—The following telegram has been received at [illegible] from Major General Terry: "General Crook telegraphs from Rawlins, Wyo., on the 3rd inst., acknowledging receipt of telegram from these headquarters which conveyed to him instructions of the acting secretary of war regarding the removal of unauthorized persons in the Uintah and Ouray reservations, etc. He reports the necessary action taken. The Utes are all on the reservation and everything quiet for the present."

[illegible] Post on the B[illegible]

WASHINGTON, September 6.—A general order has been issued by the war department proclaiming by authority of the president a tract of land within the limits of the Uintah Indian reservation a military reservation for a post of Fort Duchesne.

[illegible]

BUTTE, Mont., September 6.—A special to the Miner from Calgary, Northwest territory, says: Trouble is feared among the Blackfeet Indians. About ten days ago an Indian was shot at by a white man for trifling cause and seriously hurt. His tribe were much incensed and at one time it was thought they would attack his assailant. After a few days the wounded Indian died and the news was sent through all the tribes. Simultaneously with this another Indian named Deer Foot escaped from the jail here and reached the reservation. The police demanded his return, but the young brave refused to divulge his hiding place. Consequently [illegible] two large detachments of mounted police under C[illegible] Herchmer will proceed to the reservation from here and Fort McLeod and arrest Deer Foot's captor. Another force has been detached from Regina as a reserve. With the present excited state of feeling among the Indians serious trouble is feared and residents of Calgary feel positively alarmed. The Blackfeet are the most powerful tribe in the northwest and would be a terrible foe if they went on the war path. There is also no doubt but if they break out other tribes, notably the Crees, will follow them on the war path.

Dr. [illegible]

DUBUQUE, Iowa, September 6.—Dr. Carver in a shooting exhibition to-day broke [illegible] glass balls in forty-three minutes and twenty-three and one half seconds.

Hawaii Still in T[illegible]

CHICAGO, September 6.—The Times San Francisco special says: Practical advices received by steamer from New Zealand and Honolulu state that there is much dissatisfaction among the better class of foreigners at Honolulu on account of the military dictatorship which has grown up since the semi-revolution of June 30 and has extended to the complete control of the press, a newspaper being even forbidden publishing ordinary court proceedings, such as the trial of Hayselden, ex-Premier Gibson's son-in-law. So great was this terror that not a single journal in Honolulu dared reprint the comment of American newspapers on the revolt in Hawaii, although every one was eager to get copies and to see for themselves what was said.

Business continues dull, owing to the sense of insecurity and unrest. It is tacitly admitted that the constitution is not a final settlement of the points at issue. Disfranchisement of a section of natives who will not swear to the constitution and the restricted franchise are almost certain to lead to trouble.

Information was received that on one of the outlying islands of the Sandwich group a massacre of three boatmen belonging to the schooner May Anderson was lately made by natives under exceptionally brutal circumstances. The boat men were first so severely wounded as to render themselves helpless, tied hand and foot and then taken in canoes over to another island and traded for pigs. The purchaser then finished them and had a cannibal feast on their bodies.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 6.—The steamship Australia arrived from Honolulu this afternoon, leaving there on August 30. The political situation on the islands remains unchanged. Active preparations are going forward for the election which occurs on September 12. Complete success of the new constitutional party is declared to be assured.

The United States man of war Hartford, flag ship of the Pacific squadron arrived at Honolulu August 26th, having been thirty-seven days in making the journey from Callao.

A proposition will be laid before the next legislature for the construction of an ocean cable connecting the Hawaiian group of islands.

Business is reported very dull in Honolulu, but a revival of business is anticipated after the coming election.

The Honolulu Daily Bulletin in commenting upon the political canvass says: "There never was a period in this country's brief history when respectable citizens were less free to express their independent thoughts than at the present time. If a man does utter a moderate opinion or an opinion in any way adverse to the extreme notions of the narrow faction which is guided more by blind impulse than calculating reason he is at once reported." It partly intimates that the present power proposes to control affairs on the island at any cost.

BALTIMORE, September 6.—The [illegible] says: The question as to who is to succeed President Garrett is settled. The man whom the syndicate have settled upon as possessing all the requirements of the place is Samuel Spencer, at present first vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio road. [illegible] progressive administration and will do as much as [illegible] independence while steering clear of complications. The choice of Spencer is with Garrett's full concurrence and approval.

German Catholics in America.

CHICAGO, September 5.—The first business session of the German Roman Catholics' central union of America was opened this morning with prayer by Rev. Dr. William Tappert, of Covington, Ky. President Spaunhorst made an address of greeting. He claimed the attitude of German Catholics toward other nationalities had been misrepresented and false reports circulated. In his opinion German Catholics recognize no distinction of nationalities. He asked the delegates to use no hard expressions against other nationalities. Germans in America were obliged to preserve the German language in their schools. On that account they had been reproached with trying to Germanize America. That charge was unjust.

After the appointment of committees a resolution was offered by Mr Meitch of St. Paul urging all Catholic working people to keep away from the so called Knights of Labor, as he failed to see any difference between the Knights of Labor and other socialist and prohibition [illegible]. Mr Powderly had [illegible] shown himself to be a prohibitionist and the [illegible]. The entire order of Knights of Labor was governed by [illegible]. One ought to consider it a disgrace to be ruled by an ignoramus.

The resolutions were referred to a committee on labor matters. An interesting [illegible] was [illegible] when the report from the society of New Orleans was [illegible], which was written in the English language. Objection was made to receiving it on that account. Dr. Tappert moved that the secretary be instructed to find out whether the German language was employed as the official [illegible] by that society or not, and if not the secretary notify them that the central union accepted no societies but such as employ the German language exclusively [illegible] forced to [illegible] constitution.

A cablegram was ordered sent to Pope Leo, congratulating him upon his approaching jubilee and asking his blessing.

Work of the Patent Office.

WASHINGTON, September 6.—The commissioner of patents in his annual report says that at the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, the office was well up with the business in charge. The number of applications for patents of all kinds received during the year was 40,678. The commissioner renews the recommendation of his predecessor that the patent office be furnished with more rooms.

Referring to the defalcation of Financial Clerk Bacon, deceased, the commissioner says that the shortage was $31,061, against which were found due bills, miscellaneous memoranda, etc., amounting to $15,011. From the aggregate due bills $461 has been collected.

The number of patents granted during the year, including reissues and designs, was 21,742; the number of trade marks registered 1101, number of labels registered 384; number of patents expired 12,782. Receipts of the office aggregate $1,150,046; expenditures $981,644; surplus $169,401.

CHICAGO, September 6.—The first German Catholic convention, for which the Catholic Central union has been preparing three days, met to-night in Battery D armory. There were over five thousand people present. Ex-Lieut. Governor Spaunhorst of Missouri made the first address. Rev. Dr. Tappert announced the receipt of a letter from Cardinal Rampolla, papal secretary of state, giving the pope's blessing to the convention.

Joseph Jessing of Columbus, Ohio, took up the subject of "Mission of the German Catholic school in the United States." He declared it was necessary to stick to the German mother tongue in order that the school and home could work hand in hand and a harmonious education be the result. He unhesitatingly declared Catholics wanted to influence the school system of this country in accordance with their principles.

The session concluded with reading of a letter of congratulation from Herr Windthorst, leader of the Catholics in Germany, and the introduction by Dr. Tappert of resolutions which were adopted.

Chi[illegible] Surveyors at the C[illegible]

WASHINGTON, September 6.—The departure of Secretary Bayard from Washington this morning prevented the Chinese envoys and Count Mitkiewicz from calling upon him. Nothing is known at the department of state of the nature of the concession beyond that contained in official advices from the United States consul at Tientsin already published. Unless the viceroy's letter throws new light upon the matter, officials of the department are at a loss to know how the United States can aid the envoys in the negotiation of the concession or even recognize them officially as it appears that their mission is purely personal.

P[illegible]ings of the Medical Congress.

WASHINGTON, September 6.—President Davis called the international medical congress to order at 11 o'clock this morning and introduced Mr. Austin Flint, LL.D., of New York who proceeded to read his paper on fever, its causes, mechanism and rational treatment, after which President Davis announced that the amount of work in the various sections was such that it was found desirable that they should hold sessions for two hours in the afternoon. For this reason it would [illegible]ly be more satisfactory if the address of Prof. Semmola, assigned for to-day, be postponed until to-morrow. The [illegible] adjourned until to-morrow.

THE THEATRE HORROR

Burning of the Theatre Royal.

LONDON, September 6.—The Standard says: The awful [illegible] Exeter theatre [illegible] of experience.

The News says: It is safe to say that the effect of this awful disaster will be a general law governing the construction and management of public places throughout the kingdom. After this accident and that of the Opera Comique in Paris we ought surely to [illegible] warnings.

LONDON, September 6.—The victims of the burning of the Theatre Royal last night were mostly working people. As soon as the flames were put out a large force began searching for bodies. The stairway leading to the gallery was literally packed with bodies, while at the head of the stairs there were scores of others piled one on top of another. The unfortunate victims had rushed to the door when the alarm was given, but found the stairway blocked and escape cut off. In a short time the flames had reached them and they suffered a horrible death.

There were pitiful scenes in the vicinity of the burned theatre this morning as friends and relatives of the supposed victims waited the recovering of the bodies. In many cases fathers and [illegible] both perished, and numbers of children are thus left without means of support. [illegible] were burned so that only a small [illegible]. The number of persons severely injured is sixty. It is feared the deaths will reach one hundred and forty.

LONDON, September 6.—It is ascertained there were 200 persons occupying seats in the gallery, and of these 190 were lost. The search for bodies still goes on. It is very probable the total deaths will never be ascertained, owing to the fact that many bodies were completely calcined. Two stalls in the stables belonging to a hotel adjoining are filled with remains that it is impossible to identify. Most of the killed were adults and chiefly men. But few children perished. More bodies have been taken from the ruins. The charred remains of 20 persons were discovered in one heap. A mother, father and child were found clasped in one embrace. In nearly every case the clothing had been [illegible] limbs were missing and the remains showed evidence that they had been wrenched off. Several whole families numbering from two to five persons lost their lives.

The construction of the gallery staircase accounts for the great loss of life. Half way down the flight there was a sharp angle. The first persons who left the gallery got past safely but several of those who followed were thrown down and jammed into the angle and unable to extricate themselves owing to the pressure from behind. The staircase at this place was effectually blocked and there was no other way to escape.

The scene shifter says the fire started among gauze which became ignited. The flames spread to the scenes, of which the stage was unusually full owing to preparations for the production of a pantomime. The audience numbered 800 persons.

LONDON, September 6.—In the house of commons to-day Mr Matthews, home secretary, said the calamity at Exeter showed the necessity of legislation in the matter, and the government intended to deal with the subject.

An inquest over the victims was begun to-day. It was impossible to identify many of the bodies. The jury simply viewed the remains. A public funeral will be held to-morrow.

Tariff Talks.

WASHINGTON, September 6.—The Republican to-morrow will say: The president, ex-Speaker Randall and Speaker Carlisle had a conference at Oakview this afternoon. The discussion related principally to the tariff bill which has practically received the endorsement of the administration, an outline of which contemplates abolition of the tobacco and fruit brandy tax, a reduction of customs duties and large additions to the free list. This measure has been referred to Secretary Fairchild. No conclusion was reached, but the matter was left for another conference to be held in the near future.

TOLEDO, O., September 6.—Word has just been received from the Northwestern insane asylum, four miles from this [illegible] place, [illegible]ously injuring the buildings and demolishing one or two. Telephone lines are prostrated and there is no direct communication. The buildings cost about half a million dollars.

Wire [illegible] With V[illegible]

WASHINGTON, September 6.—The department of state has received copies of a recent contract made between the Venezuelan government and Cuneo Cruz of Venezuela for the establishment of telegraphic communication between Venezuela and the United States. The project is expected to result in great benefit to both countries.

Im[illegible]ing For[illegible]

BOSTON, September 6.—The recent importation into this port from Ireland of five female spinners by Ross, Turner & Co., manufacturers of twine, thread, etc., has resulted in a suit by the United States against the firm for violation of the United States statute prohibiting importation of foreign labor. The penalty is $1,000 in each case.

Legislative Bribery.

CONCORD, N. H., September 6.—In the senate this afternoon Senator Sawyer rising to a question of personal privilege, stated that Kirk D. Pierce had on Wednesday last offered him a bribe of $500 to make a speech in favor of the pending Boston and Maine railroad bill, and that he had spurned the offer. A committee of investigation was appointed. Pierce declares the charges untrue.

Mrs. Cleveland Declines.

NEW YORK, September 6.—A letter has been received by the mayor and board of aldermen from Mrs. Cleveland, in which she declines an invitation to make the presentation of flags to the fire department. She bases her declination upon her unwillingness to assume that she as wife of the president ought to participate [illegible] ceremony in which the president took no part.

Rowing Regatta.

WATKINS, N. Y., September 6.—Trial heats of the Watkins regatta were rowed on Seneca lake this evening. The course, which was three miles with turn, was rough at the lower end. In the first heat Hamm beat Teneyck, time 20:06. In the second Bubear beat Courtney and McLaughlin; time 21:04. In the third Teemer beat Lee and G[illegible] in the darkness, time 20:56. Teemer, Bubear and Hamm will row the final heat to-morrow.

CHICAGO, September 6.—In the German Catholic meeting to-day resolutions denouncing the Knights of Labor were reported back unfavorably to the convention. An animated discussion ensued, but the report was finally adopted unanimously. A resolution recommending that local societies imitate the example of Toledo Catholics and establish an intelligence office for the assistance of German Catholic working men was also adopted.

Harper's [illegible]

CINCINNATI, September 6.—From the report of the trustees of E. L. Harper & Co. it appears that the firm held no real estate and that the face value of their assets consisting of stocks, bonds, notes, etc., was $120,085, while the appraised value was $9,610. The other assets were book accounts of the face value of $1,171,733, appraised at $94,131, making the total appraised value of assets $103,[illegible]. The total direct liabilities are $1,462,741, indirect liabilities as indorsers $1,692,073. Among the debts is one of $358,000 from E. L. Harper and it appears this firm endorsed for Harper's other firms. The firm of E. L. Harper & Co. was an [illegible]. The showing would give creditors about 4 per cent on their claims.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Fall Term Opens Under Favorable Auspices.

An Increased Enrollment Over Previous Years.

Radical Changes in the High School Course.

The Deaf-Mute and Blind Institute Also Opened.

The public schools of the city opened yesterday with Professor L. L. Byington in charge. A much larger number of scholars presented themselves than [illegible] on opening day, but not even an estimate of the aggregate number who will attend during the term can be made for several days. It is evident, however, that the enrollment will be much larger than ever before. During the day 110 scholars were enrolled who had never before attended in this city, and it is known that twenty-five or thirty more new ones will be on hand to-day.

Professor S. A. Jones, who recently arrived from China, Maine, will act as principal of the high school, with Miss M. M. Chellis assistant. They will be further assisted by another competent teacher, who is expected to arrive in a few days from the east. The classification of the schools, teachers and grades throughout the city is as follows:

High school—corner Cascade avenue and Bijou streets. S. A. Jones, principal; Miss M. M. Chellis, first assistant. Grade 8, Miss M. T. Ballard; grade 7, Miss Agnes George; grade 6, Miss J. E. Shuland.

Lincoln—corner Cascade avenue and Costilla street. Mrs. E. J. Morton principal and in charge of grade 3. Grade 2, Mrs. E. E. Ormes; grade 5, Miss E. D. Mace; grade 4, Miss M. Hanna.

Liller—corner Wa[illegible]h avenue and Cucharas street. Mrs. E. K. La Barthe, principal and in charge of grade 6; Grade 5, Mrs. M. A. [illegible]; grade 2, Miss M. J. [illegible]; grade 1, Mrs. L. A[illegible]

Garfield—Cor[illegible] Wahsatch avenue and St. Vrain street. Miss E. Goudy, principal, and in charge of grade 1; Grade 2, Miss M. M. Vella; grade 3, Mary L. Martin; grade 4, Miss E. L. Wadleigh.

Miss E. L. White has charge of the Garfield annex, on Weber street, and teaches grade four. It is probable that grade six will, in a short time, outgrow its quarters in the high school building, and in that event the grade will be transferred to the Garfield annex.

At the high school an entirely new order of things has been inaugurated. Hereafter there will be but one [illegible] daily, [illegible] of beginning the [illegible] at 9 o'clock in the morning and closing at 4 in the afternoon with an intermission of an hour and thirty minutes at noon. The session now begins at 8:30 a.m. A recess of 15 minutes duration is allowed at 10:30, and then the session is continued till 1 o'clock, when school is dismissed for the day. This arrangement affects no one in the building except high school students proper. The plan is one which has been adopted by all the leading high schools throughout the east, and is also in operation in the Denver high school. It is considered preferable to the old system, and meets generally the approval of those interested in this city.

A radical change has also been [illegible] in the classification of studies. Heretofore the high school course consisted of grades 9, 10 and 11. With the beginning of the present year the term "grade" will be abandoned, and the high school course will be divided into first, second, third and fourth years. Instead of the single course heretofore taught two separate courses have been created. One is called the classical course. An extra year in Latin has been added, making four years in this language, and a three years' course in Greek, which has never before been studied in the schools of this city, will also be taught. The general course will include German and two years of French, which is also a new study.

In addition to this the board authorized the purchase of $1500 worth of physical apparatus, to be used as aids in the study of chemistry, physics, astronomy and other sciences. The laboratory is being newly fitted up, and students will hereafter have increased advantages and facilities for research.

Professors Byington and Jones are well satisfied with the new order of things, and feel assured that the change will be a gratifying and successful one. They have entered upon their duties with enthusiasm and will make the most of their opportunities to advance the interests of the schools. They deem it very desirable and important that all high school pupils take one of the above mentioned courses, although they will be allowed, as irregular students, to select from either of them such studies as they desire to pursue.

The high school course is now thorough and complete, and those who continue it through the four years will be fitted to immediately enter any college in the country. The increased facilities for preparatory instruction, will therefore, no doubt result in marked benefit to our own institutions for higher education.

All of the schools start out with brilliant prospects of a most successful school year. The buildings are all in first class order, nearly all of them being new, and needed changes and improvements have been made in the sections and grounds. The corps of teachers are excellent. Most of them are tried and have heretofore given the best satisfaction. A number of changes [illegible] in the course of studies in all the schools and the scholars [illegible] seem to be entering upon the term with eagerness and enthusiasm.

Negotiations are now pending whereby the services of [illegible] in vocal music and drawing for the graded schools of the city. This will be a new feature and [illegible] interest of [illegible]

Through the influence of the Woman's Christian Temperance union the study of the effects of narcotics and alcoholic stimulants on the human system was introduced into the school course last year. Since that time the legislature has made this study compulsory, and it will be continued with more thoroughness in the future and in the particular manner prescribed by law.

The term commences this year with exceptionally bright prospects. With an increased attendance and greater opportunities for advancement, it is almost certain to be the most successful in the history of schools in this city. The school board deserve praise for the interest they have manifested and the liberality with which they have provided every possible means for the better and more profitable instruction of the young.

THE DEAF MUTE AND BLIND INSTITUTE.

The fall and winter term of the State Institute for Deaf Mutes and Blind opened yesterday, though little was accomplished during the day aside from the reception and enrollment of pupils. There will be an increased attendance over last year, about fifty pupils having already arrived, and fifteen more are now on the way. Of these sixty-five, about two-thirds are deaf mutes and the remainder blind.

The institution is again in charge of Professor Dudley, who, unfortunately, is at present confined to his bed by an illness which has been very serious, but he is now rapidly convalescing, and hopes soon to be able to resume the duties of his position.

To-day the classes will begin their studies under the following [illegible]: Professor D. C. Dudley, [illegible]ent; Miss Louise K. T[illegible], matron; Mrs. C. C. Wyeth, [illegible]; [illegible] A. [illegible], [illegible] of blind; Mr. H. M. Harbert, teacher of mutes; Miss Jennie Lee, teacher of mutes; Mr. E. C. Campbell, [illegible] of mutes; Prof. John Ray, [illegible] of mutes; Miss Mary Harbert, [illegible]; Samuel [illegible], foreman carpenter shop; F. T. Brown, gardener.

All were connected with the institute during the last term, with the exception of Professor John Ray, teacher of [illegible], and all are thoroughly versed in the peculiar line of instruction. Miss Th[illegible], the matron, has for eight years been engaged in the instruction of deaf mutes, five years of which time she has devoted to articulation. She is thoroughly familiar with both manual and oral methods of instruction, and so far has been very successful in her labors in this institution.

The course of study at the institute is as thorough as in any school of the kind in the west, and no pains are spared to [illegible] the happiness and usefulness of the unfortunates. Professor Dudley is an experienced and competent instructor and takes great interest in the welfare and advancement of his pupils.

During the [illegible] season the institute building has been renovated and put in thorough repair, and the grounds have been beautified by Mr. F. T. Brown, the competent gardener. Electric lights have also been placed in the building.

The school opens under the most favorable auspices, and with a prospect of a very successful term. Judge Henri R. Foster, president of the board of directors is now at the institute and will assist the teachers in the organization of cl[illegible]

COLORADO CITY ITEMS.

Mr. John Rohman has been making some needed improvements in the interior of his Midland saloon.

Work is progressing rapidly on Frank Clark's new restaurant. He expects to occupy it about the first of next month.

Mr. Max [illegible] of Colorado Springs yesterday commenced work on a new two story building, one room of which will be occupied as a meat market.

John Rohman has the only street lamp in Colorado City in front of his place of business. If others would follow his example Colorado avenue would be a well lighted street.

Colorado City is beyond doubt, the most growing and booming place in El Paso county, but she has one great need—a suitable hotel for the accommodation of the many people who come and are forced to seek quarters elsewhere.

The GAZETTE has a number of readers in Colorado City, and realizing that a closer feeling of friendship should exist between the two towns has made arrangements to supply a budget of news items from that place once a week. Mr. Minium of the Red Wood book store will have the matter in charge.

There still continues to be a number of robberies and hold ups in Colorado City, although it is hoped when the new ordinance come into effect they will have the effect to drive away all the tough characters who have infested the place. Sunday night two business houses were entered and at one of them a considerable sum of money was secured.

There are [illegible] twenty [illegible] as many Utes now in southern [illegible] to do as [illegible] with Colorow.

Mr. Thom[illegible] Sturges, a well known cattle man in Wyoming, is authority for [illegible] that the fall of [illegible] in the price of beef cattle in the last four years has accrued to the advantage of the [illegible]. By [illegible] the person who buys the beef cattle but the [illegible] who eats the [illegible] [illegible] of fact, [illegible] is high as [illegible] than it was four years ago.

We [illegible] to say that the charges made by the New York Tribune have been very well [illegible] ventilated in the columns of the N[illegible]. All who have read the pa[illegible] [illegible] with the fact that the [illegible] one day would turn out to be false the next day. The [illegible] has simply made itself ridiculous by the [illegible] which its [illegible] have publ[illegible] and which its offi[illegible] telegraphed to Washington.

The Toledo Blade about a [illegible] ago, made a canvass [illegible] its subscribers to obtain their prefer[illegible] for candidates for republican nomination for president and vice-president. It will be re[illegible] that Robert T. Lincoln was the first choice for vice-president and the third for president. In its last issue it contained an interview with Mr. Lincoln on the subject. In this interview Mr. Lincoln said that if he could stop all the talk about nominating him for president he would do so. He says he very much prefers his professional life to an official life in Washington. He knew intimately of his father's administration, and also of Arthur's administration, of wh[illegible] he was a[illegible]. He says the honor is a hollow one. The reporter was impressed with Mr. Lincoln's honesty and sincerity, and we think anyone who reads the article as published in the Toledo Blade will also be so impressed. While we do not believe that the best qualification for [illegible] is not to seek it, yet it is a good qualification. The reasons which Mr. Lincoln gives for not desiring the office show him to be a man of a good deal of strength of character and a good deal of hard common sense. He appreciates life at its true value. He is able to distinguish between hollow honors and a useful life. The reading of the interview will satisfy any who thinks Mr. Lincoln's head may be turned by too great political success.

A Ja[illegible] Execution.

The Gentleman's Magazine.

As each man stepped from the path on to the plateau his eyes were firmly bandaged with white paper, the only act of mercy I saw vouchsafed that morning. Finally they were ranged in line, the two very [illegible] huddled on the ground, their poor heads as they drooped from shoulder being roughly buffeted to a proper angle by the policemen in charge. This accomplished, amid a silence so absolute that we could almost hear our hearts beat, the great man on the camp stool rose, and unfolding a large document, read in a loud voice what we supposed to be a description of the crimes for which the poor fellows were to suffer and the process of condemnation and sentence. This was a very long business, and before it had nearly finished the native spectators were laughing and joking upon the appearance of the doomed men, with that callousness to human suffering which so [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] character of the Japanese. At last it was finished. As there were five holes for seven prisoners two would be obliged to remain in blind agony while their comrades were being dispatched. Five men were accordingly thrust forward with the staves and fists of the police, each man was made to squat on a mound, his clothes—if filthy, tattered rags could be called clothes—stripped from his shoulders, his hands tied behind his back, and his head pushed forward over the hole. Our feelings at this awful moment can better be imagined than described, but I think we felt quite as much pity for the two poor wretches left alone to listen to what was going on without that artificial aid to [illegible] sometimes gives, as for their companions on their death seats. Undoubtedly execution by the trenchant Japanese sword is as merciful a death as can be desired, but the Oriental nature, as if to compensate for this erring on the side of mercy, counterbalances it by an undue prolongation of the preparations for death, which is worse than a hundred deaths. [illegible] the poor fellows knelt over their holes the executioner slowly and deliberately took off his coat and bared his arms. Then he took from its sack casing the fatal sword, examined it fondly and lingeringly from the [illegible] or fillings on the hilt to keep the grasp from slipping, along the [illegible] or groove in the blade, to the point held it over a pail while a coolie trickled water down it, and with a great deal of settling of his feet was ready. I felt sick and giddy, but I kept my eyes fixed on the scene. At a sign from the official on the camp stool, the executioner [illegible] his sword slightly, hardly half a dozen inches, and almost before I could realize it the man's head was hanging over the hole by a [illegible] ing forth in torrents. I then saw why the executioner had not completely severed the head, and the wonderful skill of the Japanese swordsmen, using as they do the [illegible] perfect weapons in the world, can be [illegible] in so arranging the force of the blow that absolute decapitation does not take place. He tore the head off and held it toward the four sides of the square, then he gave it to a coolie, who roughly plastered the severed portion with clay and stuck it on a kind of elevated shelf. In the meanwhile two coolies were thumping on the back of the prostrate body to hasten the rush of blood, after which one of the [illegible] mats was thrown over it and it was laid [illegible]. I had seen enough, and I [illegible] away as the execut[illegible], after wiping his blade with [illegible] the [illegible] poor wretch, who was shouting out [illegible] at the top of his voice, whether a con[illegible] or a de[illegible] of injustice I was not [illegible] to understand.

Friday [illegible] confiding mother sent her darling [illegible] the grocery of an errand. He was one of the bright boys, [illegible] remember errands, ride a fence, sing all the popular songs and get up at [illegible] notice. He got a quantity of white [illegible] and granulated sugar in [illegible] and started [illegible] ward wh[illegible] "Climbing up the Golden Stairs," as he held the bags by the top and swung them in time to the [illegible]. On Cliff street he rested and set the bags down on a wet step, and the paper [illegible]. When he started, humming [illegible] taking long [illegible] and slapping the bags together in front of him like a pair of cymbals, he [illegible] of the impending catastrophe. He hadn't clashed them together [illegible] than three times before the [illegible] came out and there was a pile of [illegible] and sugar mixed on the pave[illegible] at his feet. He paused a [illegible] in his conf[illegible], and then taking off his hat hurriedly [illegible] the mixed groceries into it and [illegible], whistling "Nobody knows the trouble I feel, nobody knows," etc. There is every probability that he felt trouble when he reached home with the [illegible] in his hat. [illegible] Letter.

Both men and women perform manual labor in Russia and no difference is made in the wages paid, the men receiving as much as the wo[illegible]. A strike was organized by the longshoremen and women in Odessa last year on account of a certain stevedore paying his employés more wages than the majority of stevedores were willing to pay their laborers. The men and women who were receiving the higher wages sought to prevent the other laborers from working for less than they were receiving. The result was that the authorities of the city sent a squad of cossacks with long black snake whips down to the quay to settle the difficulty, which they speedily did by compelling all hands to resume work. An order was also sent compelling the stevedore who was paying the higher wages to reduce those wages to the same price as his competitors, the authorities claiming that if an arbitrary power must be exercised the state alone had the right to do it.

Railroading in [illegible]

Savannah News.

Ben Rex is a native cowboy living three miles from Auburndale. He brought some sweet milk in bottles to Auburndale Wednesday, and Ben was a pla[illegible] type of the cracker and milk man. Holding a bottle in one hand and an old fashioned cow bell swinging loose on a rawhide belt in the other, Ben let the "town folks" know what kind of a cowboy he is. Ben Rex has learned a great many little things since the South Florida railroad was completed through those lonesome pine hills three years ago. He was seated on a grindstone in front of Patterson's store Wednesday morning, when with twinkling eyes he related how, soon after the railroad came, he stole [illegible] part of the way home. He said: "I [illegible] on the [illegible] step and the train [illegible] out. There [illegible] in the road about a mile from town and I [illegible] they would check up [illegible] found that and I couldn't jump off easy enough. Instead of that they got faster and faster. A little further on there's a trussel and I was certain they would sorter stop, but they kept gittin' faster and faster. I had a pickle dish in one hand and says I, I must go home to my wife and children [illegible]. I steadies myself and jumps square out from that [illegible]. I didn't know much for two hours. I got up 100 feet from where I first lit. I was all tore up. It was a rainin' some, white sand and oak leaves when I [illegible] has been found yit. I will always be how lagged and I [illegible] got a mind ter sue the railroad for it."

A FOREIGN EDUCATION.

[illegible] Court House, Va., March, 186[illegible]

Dearest Louise: How strange it is for me to be writing from this place, which two weeks ago I never had dreamed of seeing! Ah, how different war makes everything! What a strange people! What [illegible] in a single week!

I have so much to say to you that I don't know where to begin. I am so distraite, my poor head is in a whirl! Then I have become [illegible] to the English, which I have seldom [illegible] since I [illegible] Mme. R[illegible] at [illegible]. Think of not using one's native language for ten years. But it is fate!

I promised you that I should write as soon as I should leave the steamer on our arrival. Mon Dieu! how little we know what we [illegible] for. When I reached home I found the house [illegible] At [illegible] had come from Frank, who was with the army in Virginia, you know what I have always hoped for you and Frank, that he had been wounded and was lying at a house on a plantation at this place. Mamma was in an agony about him. She was not at all well, and very nervous. Yet she declared that she would go to Frank. What could I do! I told her that I would go myself. I, who had never travel[illegible] a mile alone, who had never in my life mingled with the world with[illegible] an attendant; I volunteered (everything is volunteer now) to go and nurse Frank.

But I can[illegible] tell you everything. There is so [illegible] to tell about what has happened since my arrival here. When the train that brought me [illegible] up at the station and I [illegible] out on to the platform, a young officer addressed me. He was [illegible] "Is this Miss Revere?" "It is, and you?" "Your brother's friend Jack Wentworth. Frank [illegible] me to meet you and [illegible] you to the [illegible] where he is lying." "Is he out of [illegible]" "He is." "Merci [illegible]" Would you believe it, I [illegible] To [illegible] that Frank [illegible] in his [illegible] have a fr[illegible] who [illegible] to [illegible] me in such a costume! He took my [illegible] umbrella, and oh, dear, how [illegible] my [illegible] and my [illegible] "I[illegible] step this way to the carriage," he said.

And what do you say, [illegible] was the [illegible] I did not know [illegible] myself or I [illegible] not have [illegible] in it for the world. It was what they carry the sick and wounded in. I got in at the end, [illegible] into a stage on Broadway in New York. Lieut. Wentworth [illegible] he [illegible]. How strange to [illegible] with a man [illegible] I had never before done anything so unconventional.

And oh, Louise, the [illegible] The jolting was [illegible] "It's [illegible] heavy guns," Mr. Wentworth [illegible] with the [illegible] He is so [illegible] He might at [illegible] have said diable. The French is not [illegible] I tried to [illegible] on the [illegible] row [illegible] in a rut, and I was [illegible] I [illegible] Mr. W[illegible]

[illegible]

In the evening it w[illegible] Mr. [illegible] May, T[illegible] up, and [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] Frank [illegible] I heard a [illegible] ing at [illegible] front of the [illegible] and a [illegible] and jingle of spurs on the [illegible] they call [illegible] Lieut. Wentworth. I went out on tiptoe and [illegible] him not to make so [illegible] as [illegible] Frank was [illegible]. He [illegible] don and went [illegible] in.

"Have you met the young girl [illegible] was with Frank?" I [illegible] to him so that I [illegible] not waken Frank.

[illegible] or [illegible]," he [illegible] [illegible] be of [illegible] I am [illegible] very kind."

"Very." He [illegible] not [illegible]

"You know Frank is [illegible]"

"No!"

"Yes, to a very dear friend of mine. At least I want him to be."

"That's not [illegible] ged," he said.

"N[illegible] It shall be as I wish."

"Suppose this girl should fall in love with him."

"Do you know that [illegible] I was forgetting. I am so glad you spoke it to me. I [illegible] ted to say it to you."

"What will you do?"

"I have done one thing already. I spoke to Frank about Louise (M[illegible] Wentworth has heard Frank speak of you, and [illegible] whom I [illegible] and when she was by, so that she would know. I thought she turned a little pale."

"So soon!"

"She has only known him a [illegible]. I can't [illegible] of one falling in love or marrying without a year's acquaintance."

"Nor I," he said, which I thought was very rude to say to me. [illegible] him. "Can't he be moved?"

"I [illegible] him that, but he said that he was comfortable, and did not want to be moved."

"That looks bad," Mr. Wentworth said.

"Don't say that, you frighten me."

"I[illegible] it looks bad for the girl."

"And not for Frank?" I asked.

"O! no. He's safe enough."

"What a strange man you are. You can have no feeling."

"My dear Miss Revere, why do you say that? Haven't I tried to [illegible]"

"O you have tried to [illegible] me, but you don't seem to [illegible] of that poor girl."

"Well, she may win him, you know."

"She shall not," I said, very angry with him for saying such a thing. "My [illegible] men are [illegible]. In France they know how to [illegible] a lady."

"What do you want me to say? I would like definite orders."

"I want you to help me get Frank away."

"But he won't go."

"You [illegible] make him go."

"If those are the orders I'll do what I can. Suppose we try strat[illegible]."

"What's that?"

"We might get up a scare. I'll [illegible] about it over night. To-morrow afternoon I shall call for you to go to ride with me. Then we can talk it over."

"In the ambulance?"

"No. I know where I can get a buggy. I shall be here at 4 o'clock."

"And tell me what you have decided!"

"Yes."

He took my hand to say good night. Mon Dieu! what boldness. There were five men walking around a camp near by. We could see them in the moonlight. Lieut. Wentworth told me it was a corporal with men to relieve the guard. Do you know, Louise, that this man held my hand till they had marched all the way around the camp? Wasn't it shocking?

The next afternoon Mr. Wentworth drove up in the thing he called a buggy. You should have seen it. It must have belonged to the first [illegible] of Virginia, and had not seen a coat of paint since he used it last.

"Who is to go with me?" I asked.

"No one."

"Then I will not go."

"What in the world do you mean?"

[illegible] "I am not accustomed to [illegible] [illegible] without another person."

"But there's only room for two."

"I will not go. It is not proper."

"Proper be——" I don't know what he would have said. He didn't finish. He [illegible] me. It was impo[illegible]. I would not go without an attendant.

"I have it," he said at last. "Major M[illegible] over there will lend me his orderly. Will you go if I get an orderly?"

"What is an orderly?"

"A soldier to ride forty paces to the rear."

"I think that would be proper."

Then he went over to the camp, and in a few minutes [illegible] came out [illegible] mounted.

"We rode [illegible] the [illegible] along [illegible] roads and [illegible] all quiet. [illegible] We talked of many things and at last I asked him to tell me his plan by which he would hope to get Frank away.

"It [illegible] very lucky," he said. "I [illegible] this morning that Mosby is making a raid [illegible]."

"Mosby! [illegible]"

"[illegible] Mosby, [illegible] Confederate [illegible]. They say he is not far away. Now all we have to do [illegible] get [illegible] ing Frank to [illegible] that Mosby is coming, get him on the move, and after we have accomplished the separation, all will be well." "But would [illegible]" "[illegible] Mon Dieu, what's that?" He [illegible] been in English, but it sounds so harsh I cannot write it.

I looked where he was looking, up the road. We could see a great distance. [illegible] a cloud of dust.

"Those are not our men," Mr. Wentworth said. "We have no cavalry here. It's [illegible] the rear. Orderly!"

The man behind came up, and the lieutenant told him to ride back as quickly as he could and warn the camp. Then he turned the horse's head into a by-road [illegible] lashed it with a [illegible] and whipped the horse. He made him pull up, and soon we heard the clatter of horses' hoofs go by on the road we had left.

We did not dare to go back, because we knew the Confederates would take [illegible] as there was but a small guard there. So we drove on and on until it was dark, and [illegible] the moon rose. At last we came to a house [illegible] with a dim light in the [illegible].

[illegible]

ENTERTAINMENT FOR MAN AND BEAST.

And Mr. Wentworth said we must alight. [illegible] [illegible] don't!"

"We can't go back without falling into the hands of guerrillas."

Mon Dieu! mon Dieu! I [illegible] faint.

"And must we stay out all night?"

"That's just what we'll have to do."

"It cannot be. It [illegible] not be. It shall not be."

"Well, let's alight," he said, "and talk it over. No wrong must come to her [illegible] Revere's [illegible]."

My dear Louise, can you imagine that terrible state of mind, to be out with a man at a hotel at 10 o'[illegible] at [illegible], and cut off from my brother.

"Je suis detruite," I cried, [illegible] into tears.

"Dear [illegible]," he said, taking my [illegible], "what can I do to comfort you?"

[illegible] at the door of [illegible] "The [illegible] What a [illegible] Mr. W[illegible]"

"Landlord!" [illegible] Mr. W[illegible] near?"

"[illegible] any boy can git him, I reckon."

"[illegible] for him," Mr. Wentworth [illegible]

I was [illegible] We [illegible] and I threw myself on a sofa and [illegible] my face in the cushion. I knew there was but one thing to save me from the [illegible], the [illegible] world. But [illegible] to be married to a man I had met but the day before! Ah, Dieu! It was terrible.

The [illegible] and we were married.

The next day we [illegible] that the men we had seen were really Mosby's men. He had [illegible] the town, but left it soon after midnight.

We drove back, alas! only to new misfortune. Mosby had [illegible] Frank [illegible] and told him he [illegible] him [illegible] to prison. Caroline, the girl from w[illegible] we had planned to get Frank away [illegible] that he should not go wounded to a southern prison alone. She went with him. And Frank [illegible] and then for her devotion [illegible] who was also taken prisoner, to marry [illegible]. Then after it was all over Mosby [illegible] means that he could go free if he would [illegible] be hanged! [illegible] this before [illegible]

Ma[illegible] I [illegible] married, Frank [illegible] and you are not to be [illegible] My husband says he loves me, [illegible] the day before our wedding he said [illegible] he could not learn to love any one in less than a year, but I think I [illegible] wife too.

I [illegible] that you may never [illegible] forced [illegible]

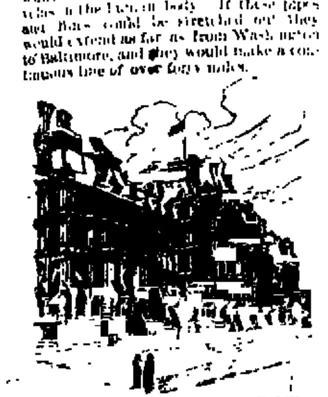
THE NEW STATE, WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENT BUILDING

Ten Millions in Brick and Stone—Its Wonderful Dimensions—Two Miles of Corridors and Forty Miles of Pipe—Doors at $[illegible] Each.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. [illegible]—The great building of the state, war and navy departments will soon be completed. [illegible] with its [illegible] and [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] of its [illegible] [illegible] doors and [illegible] the [illegible] of the building itself.

[illegible] the largest [illegible] building in the world. [illegible] the Capitol, [illegible] It will cost, when completed, $10,[illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] weighing all the way from [illegible] of a ton to a ton each. [illegible] granite blocks [illegible] The floor space of the building [illegible] would cover a twenty-acre field, and it would make one of the biggest [illegible] in the country. The length of its corridors is more than two miles, and these corridors are so wide that [illegible] two loaded [illegible] of hay could be driven through them without grazing the walls on either side. The whole building is one perfect network of pipes and lines which run through every part like the veins in the human body. If these pipes and lines could be stretched out they would extend as far as from Washington to Baltimore, and they would make a continuous line of over forty miles.



NEW STATE, NAVY AND WAR BUILDING.

Among the many rich men who will read this letter there is probably not one who has as many dollars as there are bricks in the [illegible] of this big building, and if I could have the cost of half a dozen [illegible] I should [illegible] very well off. Each of the four [illegible] wings has two stairways, and the [illegible] of each of [illegible] ways cost $9,000. The rails are of the finest mahogany, and cost more than $1 a foot, and the [illegible] which uphold them are elegant [illegible] affairs. [illegible] the size of a [illegible] club. [illegible] eight stairways have cost $72,000 for their balustrades, and when you count in the stains of the [illegible] they will run up considerably more than this. The stairs of the south wing [illegible] cost $[illegible],000, and its [illegible] more than [illegible] the [illegible] work cost [illegible] than $1,000,000, and its roof [illegible] than $100,000. The [illegible] fitting of this wing cost as [illegible] as there are soldiers in the United States army, and [illegible]

It cost $91,000.

* * *

The doors which enter the offices cost over $200 each. They are of South American mahogany, made by hand, the total cost of them must run into the hundreds of thousands, and it is impossible to describe the [illegible] of the iron and wood work which look down upon you from every side. The naval library of the east wing is made up entirely of iron and stone, and its castings [illegible] the hand [illegible] of wood [illegible] It has [illegible] which are equal to anything the United States can show, and it is [illegible] up of [illegible] from the Southern Alps, from France and Minnesota. Its floor is of [illegible]

* * *

This building is perfectly fireproof. It is made entirely of iron and [illegible], with the exception of a skin of boards laid over the stone floors of the offices for the comfort of the clerks, the mahogany doors and the wood [illegible] rail spoken of above. The casings of the doors and windows are of iron, and the weight of the iron in the casings is 2,000 [illegible] as that of 20,000 men of 200 pounds each. The roof is of iron and [illegible], and its water works are such that a stream of water could be turned into any room at a [illegible] notice. Throughout the various corridors you see great coils of hose, with nozzles upon them, hung up on the wall, and the structure of the building is such that a fire in any one room could not be carried to others except by the doorway. The building is perhaps the most healthful habitation in Washington. Its ventilation is perfect, and its walls [illegible] a network of air shafts of all sizes and of the latest invention. Before the work was commenced provisions were made for a complete system, and it was known exactly where every flue, every gas pipe, every sewer pipe and every wire should go. The result is that none of these pipes or wires are visible, but they extend throughout the building under the floors and through the walls.

The wires are arranged so that a perfect system of communication can be kept up with the different parts of the structure. Secretary Whitney can touch a button and ring a bell which will call to him a man who is working perhaps a half of a mile away, and Secretary Endicott by a similar touch can stop the elevator so that he need not wait in the hall when he wishes to go to a lower floor. This system of communication is provided for nearly every one having clerks under him, and an [illegible] amount of time is thus saved.

* * *

The heating is done by hot water, which Superintendent Snyder says is better than steam, and an equable temperature is kept up the year round. If the weather is a little damp, water at the temperature of 95 degs. is distributed throughout the building and the arrangements are such that the heat can be graduated to a degree. Speaking of the heating, the basement contains several steam engines, and under the courtyard there is a labyrinth of vaults for coal. Fifteen hundred tons can be stored here at once, and moving about through the vaults and the basement is like going through a great subterranean cavern.

This great building lies in the very heart of the capital. To the right is the White House, and facing it stands the Corcoran Art gallery, with its marble statues looking out at it from their niches in the walls. At its left begins what was once the fashionable part of Washington, and standing at its western side you can see the octagon house in which Col. John Taylor, one of the millionaires of Madison's days, lived, and containing the room in which Madison [illegible] Just below it lies the president's stables and the wide Potomac with its hundreds of acres of reclaimed flats. Here also is Davy Burns' cottage, where lived the testy old Scotchman whose big farm was cut up to make this part of the city of Washington, and beside this is the Van Ness mansion, where Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr used to rail to pay their compliments to the Scotchman's daughter, who had at this time married a congressman from New York. The whole surrounding of this new building is historic, and its wonderful architecture comes out in striking [illegible] with the [illegible]

It is of the Roman-Doric [illegible], with a touch here and there of the French [illegible] It has four [illegible] of [illegible] and its roof is 128 feet above [illegible]

ground. [illegible] with the W[illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] you through plate glass eyes, and [illegible] of which is carved with the [illegible] United States. [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] granite steps leading to [illegible] Walk about it and [illegible] which comes [illegible] Walk a few feet forward and you look down [illegible] from the [illegible] of which hang a [illegible] of beautiful brass chandeliers, each [illegible] four [illegible] in the middle of a carved tree. These [illegible] mahogany doors at either side lead to the offices of the thousands of clerks who are here carrying on the business of the government. Watchmen and messengers [illegible] the corridors along the walls, and now and then an intellectual looking clerk moves quietly by with a bundle of papers in his hand. All the business pertaining to our army, our navy and to our diplomatic service is done here, and each of the [illegible] is full of enough interesting material to fill columns of this paper. In the state department I can show you the archives of the government, and when you have looked at the original constitution of the United States or an almanac of Jefferson with marginal notes, if you have a permit from Secretary Bayard you might be able to see letters which have come to Uncle Sam from every king and queen who has sat upon a throne since our origin as a government. In the navy department they can show you how ships are constructed, and how the nautical almanac, the biggest [illegible] of its kind in the world, is [illegible], and in the war department are the archives of the Confederacy and autograph papers covering the wars and the soldiers of our history. This building, both architecturally and otherwise, will long continue to be one of the most interesting structures of the United States.

ABOUT OUR GARMENTS.

What Men and Women Will Wear Indoors and Out.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—American ladies are better dressed than all the fair femininity across the water. The secret of it is they know how to wear their clothes. An observer says that the particular reason why American women achieve such magnificent success [illegible] is that their clothes are well made and they know how to put them on. And this is where English women of all ranks and classes make dead failures. It is even said that Miss Brady, though really beautiful, would not have been the great social figure that she was among the English aristocracy but for the perfection of her toilets, which were all from Worth. And then, the wearing of them. No lily born to its clothing of white beauty could be more simply and naturally fresh.

But then, eternal vigilance is the price of being well dressed. A faultlessly dressed [illegible] The details of a toilet require time and care and thought. There are ladies who are not willing to put in their lives in merely clothing their bodies. They can be [illegible] neither carelessly nor faultlessly, and get on very well and have more time to put in more profitably.

It is what they call the "height of the season" at swell watering places. Newport has been having polo matches. There fine toilets were displayed. The piazzas of the club houses were crowded with fair women in fine toilets. What [illegible] tailor made costumes topped off with very [illegible] hats. Some wore white, [illegible] with red in the way of ribbons and head [illegible] The business of outing—it is more of a business than a recreation—is doing [illegible] toward the picturesque. The young man in the tennis costume is a strong factor in this work. With his delicate and costly silk knickerbocker, his bright sash, and tennis racket over the shoulder, he gives a touch of the picturesque to any landscape. To be sure he is [illegible] taken for a court fool by [illegible] But [illegible] that possibility does not make him any [illegible] [illegible] like [illegible] we have [illegible] with [illegible] be a [illegible] in [illegible] a republic.

Cloth [illegible] for ladies are already being put out by importers for early fall wear. [illegible] and two colors will be used, the lighter color for the lower skirt and vest, the darker for the basque and drapery. Some are plain and some have braiding on the vest and lower skirt. Serpent green and gray make a pretty combination. When an outdoor jacket is made with the suit it is of the same part as the basque and drapery. Pinhead plaid cloths will be combined for autumn gowns.

Black gowns for street wear for early fall are [illegible] of wool, draped over skirts of black silk. The skirt should be entirely without trimming, but in pleats. For more dressy toilets the skirts may have stripes of color on a black ground. English women are fond of black [illegible] with colors.

W[illegible] are becoming more [illegible] the [illegible] and it is a good thing for that [illegible] away from [illegible] and [illegible] foolishness. The felt hats for traveling worn in early fall are in the shapes fashionable for men.

NAOMI TRENT.

Alderwood and Gunpowder.

Alderwood has for centuries been used in the manufacture of gunpowder, and it is no uncommon thing to find copses entirely of it alone, and these are most frequently placed in some low lying spot where a little brook runs through the [illegible], and soft, rushy land lies on either side. Dogwood, also, is in great request by the powder manufacturers, and is [illegible] the highest priced kind of [illegible] grown. After the alder is [illegible] cut into neat lengths of three feet and by and by they are sent off to [illegible] Waltham Abbey, the government mills, where they form the base of the destroying powder.—Good Words.

Interest in a Court.

OTTAWA, Ill., September 6.—The autumn session of the supreme court of the state began at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Owing to the fact that during the session the fate of the seven anarchists who are now under death sentence, is to be decided, there is intense interest in the assembling of the court. The opinion and speculation here to-day as to the probable decision is in direct opposition to the generally accepted belief in Chicago. There the announcement made by the press that the decision of the lower court had been affirmed is universally credited. Here lawyers and others interested in the case believe that the defendants will be given a new trial. If the decision of the lower court in these cases (all in one) is affirmed, the law compels the court to deliver an oral as well as written opinion, and also to fix the day of execution of the [illegible] In this event the opinion will probably be very brief. If on the other hand the decision of Judge Gary's court is reversed, the opinion will be volum[illegible]

WASHINGTON, September 6.—Information received at the department of state is to the effect that the United States representative at Piedras Negras has made a thorough investigation of the recent murder of H. Duval, an American citizen, at San Rosa. It is stated the Mexican authorities arrested the men implicated in the murder and sentenced all to ten years' imprisonment. [illegible] decision upon an appeal from the sentence the prisoners have been to Monterey. [illegible]

Ayoub Khan's

ST. PETERSBURG, September 6.—The flight of Ayoub Khan does not alter the relations existing between Russia and Afghanistan. The Afghan government had nothing to do with Ayoub's flight and does not feel called upon to concern itself with internal complications. It is not likely that Ayoub's escape will cause fresh difficulties between England and Russia, both of these governments when settling the Russo-Afghan frontier having adopted solid ethnologic basis, partially guided by Turcoman and Afghan traditions.

The Pueblo Chieftain of last Sunday was full of interesting information regarding Pueblo, and was a credit to the city. The three leading articles were "Proud Pueblo," "Our Homes" and "The Grant." Those who wish information about Pueblo should send for this paper.

Some of our state papers have commented on the ignorance shown by of the [illegible] papers in discussing the Indian trouble. The statement has been made one hundred times in our state papers this week that the Utes are out of the state. There are probably twenty [illegible] Utes now in southwestern Colorado, as were with Colorow.

Mr. Thomas Sturges, a well known cattle man in Wyoming, is authority for the statement that the fall of one-half in the price of beef cattle in the last four years has accrued to the advantage of the consumer. By consumer he must mean not the person who buys the beef cattle but the one who eats the beef. With this understanding his statement is not correct. As a matter of fact, it is higher [illegible] than it was four years ago.

[illegible] of New York [illegible] Mr. Bacon, an expert engineer [illegible] of state engineer. Mr [illegible] party. [illegible]

[illegible] News [illegible] to the [illegible] of the New York Tribune [illegible] the Ute trouble. The News [illegible] this [illegible]:

[illegible] in the territory of Wyoming and [illegible] the state, in the [illegible] unknown.

We regret to say that the charges made by the New York Tribune have been [illegible] substantiated in the columns of the News. All who have read the papers have been impressed with the fact that the statements made one day would turn out to be false the next day. The state has simply made itself ridiculous by the absurd stories which its newspapers have published, and which its officials have telegraphed to Washington.

The Toledo Blade about a month ago, made a canvass among its subscribers to obtain their preferences for candidates for republican nomination for president and vice-president. It will be remembered that Robert T. Lincoln was the first choice for vice president and the third for president. In its last issue it contained an interview with Mr. Lincoln on the subject. In this interview Mr. Lincoln said that if he could stop all the talk about nominating him for president he would do so. He says he very much prefers his professional life to an official life in Washington. He knew intimately of his father's administration, and also of Arthur's administration, of whose cabinet he was a member. He says the honor is a hollow one. The reporter was impressed with Mr. Lincoln's honesty and sincerity, and we think anyone who reads the article as published in the Toledo Blade will also be so impressed. While we do not believe that the best qualification for office is not to seek it, yet it is a good qualification. The reasons which Mr. Lincoln gives for not desiring the office show him to be a man of a good deal of strength of character and a good deal of hard common sense. He appreciates life at its true value. He is able to distinguish between hollow honors and a useful life. The reading of the interview will satisfy any who thinks Mr. Lincoln's head may be turned by too great political success.

A Japanese Execution.

The Gentleman's Magazine.

As each man stepped from the path on to the plateau his eyes were firmly bandaged with white paper, the only act of mercy I saw vouchsafed that morning. Finally they were ranged in line, the two cripples huddled on the ground, their heads as they drooped from shoulder being roughly buffeted to a proper angle by the policeman in charge. This accomplished, amid a silence so absolute that we could almost hear our hearts beat, the great man on the camp stool rose, and unfolding a large document read in a loud voice what we [illegible] to be a description of the crimes for which the poor fellows were to suffer and the process of condemnation and sentence. This was a very long homily, and before it had [illegible] finished the native spectators were laughing and joking upon the appearance of the doomed men, with that [illegible] to human suffering which so [illegible] of the otherwise amiable and [illegible] character of the Japanese people. At length it was finished. An [illegible] even prisoners, two would be obliged to remain in blind agony while their companions were being dispatched. Five men were accordingly thrust forward with the staves and fists of the police, each man was made to squat on a mound, his clothes—if filthy, tattered rags could be called clothes—stripped from his shoulders, his hands tied behind his back and his head pushed forward over the hole. Our feelings at this awful moment can better be imagined than described, but I think we felt quite as much pity for the two poor wretches left alone to listen to what was going on without that artificial aid to fortitude which the sight of a crowd sometimes gives, as for their companions on their death seats. Undoubtedly execution by the trenchant Japanese sword is as merciful a death as can be desired, but the Oriental nature [illegible] compensate for this erring on the side of mercy counterbalances it by an infinite prolongation of the preparations for death, which is worse than a hundred deaths. So in this case. As the poor fellows knelt over their holes the executioner slowly and deliberately took off his coat and bared his arms. Then he took from its silk casing the fatal [illegible] lingly from the [illegible] or fittings on the hilt to keep the grasp from slipping, along the Kirimon, or groove in the blade, to the point, held it over a pail while a coolie trickled water down it, and with a great deal of settling of his feet was ready. I felt sick and giddy, but I kept my eyes fixed on the scene. At a sign from the official on the camp stool, the executioner raised his sword slightly, hardly half a dozen inches, and almost before I could realize it the man's head was hanging over the hole by a single ligament, and the blood was gushing forth in torrents. I then saw why the executioner had not completely severed the head; and the wonderful skill of the Japanese swordsmen, using as they do the most perfect weapons in the world, can be imagined in so arranging the force of the blow that absolute decapitation does not take place. He tore the head off and held it toward the four sides of the square, then he gave it to a coolie, who roughly plastered the severed portion with clay and stuck it on a kind of elevated shelf. In the meanwhile two coolies were thumping on the back of the prostrate body to hasten the rush of blood, after which one of the coarse mats was thrown over it and it was laid aside. I had seen enough, and I turned my head away as the executioner, after wiping his blade with paper, approached the second poor wretch, who was shouting out something at the top of his voice, whether a confession or a denunciation of injustice I was not scholar enough to understand.

Bright Jobs for Talented Women.

Chicago Inter-Ocean.

In the Boston public library are women employed at a salary of $6 a week, their hours being from 9 till 5 every day except Sunday, and yet at this price the applicants far exceed the number of places to be filled. This work, too, is no [illegible] and a high degree of scholarly [illegible] especially in the [illegible]. It also demands a high quality [illegible] what may be called personal virtue [illegible] [illegible] French and German education, has a [illegible] place as superintendent in a [illegible] salary of $1,000 a year. Her attainments, so far as the purely scholarly side go, are no better than some of the library employes who receive $6 a week; but she adds to her scholarly resources a great executive ability and a keen, swift comprehension of values and relations.

[illegible] Happy Hours.

[illegible]

Friday morning a confiding mother sent her darling boy to the grocery of an errand. He was one of those bright boys, who can remember errands, ride a fence, sing all the popular songs and get up a circus at short notice. He got a quantity of white [illegible] and granulated sugar in paper bags and started homeward whistling "Climbing up the Golden Stairs," as he held the bags by the top and swung them in time to the music. On Cliff street he halted and set the bags down on a wet step, and the paper weakened. When he started, humming the air "Up in a balloon, boys," taking long strides and slapping the bags together in front of him like a pair of cymbals, he never dreamt of the impending catastrophe. He hadn't clashed them together more than three times before the bottoms came out and there was a pile of beans and sugar mixed on the pavement at his feet. He paused a moment in his confusion, and then taking off his hat hurriedly scooped the mixed groceries into it and disappeared, whistling "Nobody knows the trouble I feel, nobody konws," etc. There is every probability that he felt trouble when he reached home with the goods in his hat. The hand that caresses can wield the leather slipper, and probably it did.

How Russia Deals with Strikers.

Odessa Letter.

Both men and women perform manual labor in Russia and no difference is made in the wages paid, the men receiving as much as the women. A strike was organized by the longshoremen and women in Odessa last year on account of a certain stevedore paying his employes more wages than the majority of stevedores were willing to pay their laborers. The men and women who were receiving the higher wages sought to prevent the other laborers from working for less than they were receiving. The result was that the authorities of the city sent a squad of cossacks with long black snake whips down to the quay to settle the difficulty, which they speedily did by compelling all hands to resume work. An order was also sent compelling the stevedore who was paying the higher wages to reduce those wages to the same prices as his competitors, the authorities claiming that if an arbitrary power must be exercised the state alone had the right to do it.

Railroading in Florida.

Savannah News.

Ben Rex is a native cowboy living three miles from Auburndale. He brought some sweet milk in bottles to Armondale Wednesday, and Ben was a pleasing type of the cracker and milkman. Holding a bottle in one hand and an old-fashioned cow bell swinging loose on a rawhide belt in the other, Ben let the "town folks" know what kind of a cowboy he is. Ben Rex has learned a great many little things since the South Florida railroad was completed through these lonesome pine hills three years ago. He was seated on a grindstone in front of Patterson's store Wednesday morning, when with trembling [illegible] how, soon after the railroad came, he [illegible]. He said: "I got on the cars [illegible] the train [illegible] a bog creek in the road about a mile from town and I lowed they would check up goin' round that and I could jump off easy enough. Instead of that they got faster and faster. A little further on there's a trestel and I was certain they would sorter stop, but they kept gittin' faster and faster. I had a pickle dish in one hand and says I, 'I must go home to my wife and children shore.' I steadys myself and jumps square out from that car. I didn't know much for two hours. I got up 100 feet from where I first lit. I was all tore up. It was a rainin' some white sand and oak leaves when I left there. I lost my pickle dish and it never has been found yet. I will always be bow legged and I've got a mind ter sue the railroad for it."

A FOREIGN EDUCATION.

[illegible], March 1863.

Dearest Louise: How strange it is for me to be writing from this place, which two weeks ago I never had dreamed of seeing! Oh, how different war makes everything. What a strange people! What changes in a single week!

I have so much to say to you that I don't know where to begin. I am so distrait, my poor head is in a whirl. [illegible] the English, which I have [illegible] I went to Mme. B[illegible], at Geneva, when I was scarcely 5 years old. Think of not using one's native language for ten years. Isn't it triste?

I promised you that I should write as soon as I should leave the steamer [illegible] Mon Dieu! how little we know what we will do! When I reached home I found the house in a commotion. A telegram had come from Frank, who was with the army in Virginia (you know what I have always hoped for you and Frank), that he had been wounded and was lying at a house on a plantation near this place. Mamma was in an agony about him. She was not at all well and very [illegible]. What could I do? I told her that I would go myself; I, who had never traveled a mile alone, who had never in my life mingled with the world without an attendant. I volunteered everything is volunteer now, to go and nurse Frank.

But I can not tell you everything. There is so much to tell about what has happened since my arrival here. When the train that brought me drew up at the station and I stepped out on the platform, a young officer [illegible] me. He was superb. "Is this Miss Revere?" "It is, and you?" "Your brother's friend, Lieut. Wentworth. Frank [illegible] me to meet you and [illegible] you to the [illegible] where he is lying." "Is he out of [illegible]?" "He is." "Merci! [illegible]!" Would you believe it, Louise, his [illegible] were tucked in his [illegible]. To think that Frank should have a friend who would come to meet me in such a [illegible]! He took my—my—[illegible] oh, dear, how these words trouble me—my [illegible] and my shawls. "[illegible] step this way to the carriage," he [illegible].

And what do you [illegible] was the [illegible]? I did not [illegible] then myself or I would not have [illegible] in it for the world. It was what they carry the sick and [illegible] in. I got in at the end, as one gets into a stage on Broadway in New York. Lieut. Wentworth sat opposite me. How strange to ride with a man without a chaperone. I had never before done anything so unconventional.

And oh, Louise, the [illegible]! The jolting was terrible. "It's the heavy guns," Mr. Wentworth said; "they've played the devil with the wheeling." He is so [illegible]. He might at least have [illegible]. The French is not so [illegible]. I tried to keep myself on the [illegible] row [illegible]. It was impossible. [illegible] in a rut, and I was thrown [illegible] I went [illegible] into Mr. Wentworth's arms. I got [illegible] to my [illegible] as best I could. "[illegible]," he said. "Pardon [illegible]. I must not be [illegible] to Frank's [illegible]." [illegible]

[illegible]

In the [illegible] March [illegible] May. The [illegible] the full moon [illegible] on the [illegible] Frank and I [illegible]. He grew weary and sank into a [illegible]. I heard a clanking at the front of the house and a heavy tread and jingle of spurs on the porch, which [illegible] they call the guards. I knew it was Lieut. Wentworth. I went out on tiptoe and asked [illegible] as a battle, [illegible]. Frank was sleeping. He [illegible] pardon and we sat down in [illegible] on the veranda.

"Have you met the young girl [illegible] who [illegible] with Frank?" I whispered so to him so that I should not [illegible] Frank.

"Once or twice," he said.

"[illegible] cannot be of [illegible] I am [illegible] very kind."

"Very." He does not [illegible] long [illegible].

"You know Frank is [illegible]?"

"No!"

"Yes, to a very [illegible] friend of mine. At [illegible] I want him to be."

"That's not engaged," he said.

"N'importe. It shall be as I wish."

"[illegible] this girl should fall in love with him."

"Do you know that was what I was fearing. I am so glad you spoke it to me. I wanted to say it to you."

"What will you do?"

"I have done one thing already. I spoke to Frank about Louise (Mr. Wentworth has heard Frank speak about you, and knew whom I meant) when she was by, so that she would know. I [illegible] she turned a little pale."

"So soon!"

"She has only known him a week. I can't conceive of one falling in love or marrying without a year's acquaintance."

"Not I," he said, which I thought was very rude to say to me, sitting beside him. "Can't he be moved?"

"I asked him that, but he said that he was comfortable, and did not want to be moved."

"That looks bad," Mr. Wentworth said.

"Don't say that, you frighten me."

"I mean it looks bad for the girl."

"And not for Frank?" I asked.

"O! no. He's safe enough."

"What a strange man you are. You can have no feeling."

"My dear Miss Revere, why do you say that? Haven't I tried to"

"O you have tried to please me, but you don't seem to think of this poor girl."

"Well, she may win him, you know."

"She shall not," I said, very angry with him for saying such a thing. My countrymen are so [illegible]. In France they know how to please a lady.

"What do you want me to say? I would like definite orders."

"I want you to help me get Frank away."

"But he won't go."

"You must make him go."

"If those are the orders I'll do what I can. Suppose we try strategy."

"What is that?"

"We might get up a scare. I'll think about it over night. To-morrow afternoon I shall call for you to go to ride with me. Then we can talk it over."

"In the ambulance?"

"No. I know where I can get a buggy. I shall be here at 4 o'clock."

"And tell me what you have decided?"

"Yes."

He took my hand to say good night. Mon Dieu! what boldness. There were five men walking around a camp near by. We could see them in the moonlight. Lieut. Wentworth told me it was a corporal with men to relieve the guard. Do you know, Louise, that that man held my hand till they had marched all the way around the camp! Wasn't it shocking?

The next afternoon Mr. Wentworth drove up in the thing he called a buggy. You should have seen it. It must have belonged to the first governor of Virginia, and had not [illegible] since he used it last.

"Who is to go with us?" I asked.

"No one."

"Then I will not go."

"What in the world do you mean?"

[illegible] "I am not [illegible] to [illegible] the way good [illegible] person."

"But there's only room for two."

"I will not go. It is not proper."

"Proper be —." I don't know what he would have said. He did not finish. He saw me. It was impossible. I would not go without an attendant.

"I have it," he said at last. "Mose [illegible] over there will let me have an old [illegible]. Will you go if I get an orderly?"

"What is an orderly?"

"A soldier to ride to carry [illegible]."

"I think that would be proper."

Then he went over to the camp, and in a few minutes [illegible] came [illegible] was mounted.

We rode for a [illegible] oat fields [illegible] leaves, [illegible] things and at last I asked him to tell me his plan. [illegible] get Frank away [illegible] Mosby [illegible]

"Who is Mosby?"

"[illegible] Mosby, the Confederate guerrilla. [illegible] They say he is not far away. Now all we have to do is for me to go [illegible] Frank [illegible]. Mosby [illegible]." [illegible] Mon Dieu, what's that? He said [illegible].

I looked where he was looking, up the road. We could see a great distance. There was a cloud of dust.

"Those are not our men," Mr. Wentworth said. "We have no cavalry here; it is all at the front. O, sorry!"

The man behind came up and the lieutenant told him to ride back as quickly as he could and warn the camp. The [illegible] the horse's head [illegible] made him gallop, and soon we [illegible] the [illegible] had it.

We did not dare to go back, because we knew the Confederates would take us. [illegible] as there was but a single [illegible] we drove on and on until it was dark, and then the moon rose. At last we came to a [illegible] where there was [illegible] this.

TAVERN

[illegible] ENTERTAINMENT FOR MAN AND BEAST

[illegible] Mr. Wentworth said we must stop.

"Not here?" I said. "Have you no regard for my reputation?"

"We can't go back without falling into the hands of guerrillas."

Mon Dieu! mon Dieu! I thought I should faint.

"And must we stay out all night?"

"That's just what we'll have to do."

"It cannot be. It must not be. It shall not be."

"Well, let's alight," he said, "and talk it over. No wrong must come to my friend Frank Revere's sister in any event."

My dear Louise, can you imagine that terrible state of mind, to be out with a man at a hotel at 10 o'clock at night, and cut off from my brother?

"Je suis detruite," I cried, breaking into tears.

"Dear Elise," he said, taking my hand, "what can I do to comfort you?"

We stood at the door of the hotel. The landlord opened it. What a sorry picture we presented! Mr. Wentworth looking so [illegible], I [illegible].

"Landlord," said Mr. Wentworth, "is there a clergyman near?"

"No, but a justice lives up the road that my boy can git him, I reckon."

"Send for him." Mr. Wentworth is so decided.

I was [illegible]. We entered and I threw myself on a sofa and buried my face in the cushion. I knew there was but one thing to save me from the [illegible] world. But so sudden, so unexpected, to be linked to a man I had met but the day before! Ah Dieu! It was terrible.

The justice came and we were married.

The next day we learned that the men we had seen were really Mosby's men. He had [illegible] the town, but had left soon after midnight.

We drove back, alas! only to new misfortunes. Mosby had taken poor Frank prisoner and told him he would send him south to prison. Caroline, the girl from whom we had schemed to get Frank away, declared that she would go [illegible] with him. And Frank, who had [illegible], and then for [illegible], a chaplain, who was also taken [illegible] him. Then after it was all over Mosby changed his mind and paroled Frank [illegible] means that he could go free if he would promise not to fight any more until he should be exchanged. [illegible] before, the [illegible]. Ma chere Louise, [illegible] I am married. Frank is married and you are not to be his belle soeur. My husband says he loves me, [illegible] he says [illegible] to love any one but [illegible] Frank [illegible].

[illegible]

Will you [illegible]

Adieu, ma chere. Your [illegible]

Elise Wentworth.

THE NEW STATE, WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENT BUILDING

Ten Millions in Brick and Stone—Its [illegible] of Dimensions—Ten Miles of Corridors and Forty Miles of Pipe. Doors at $200 Each.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The great building of the state, war and navy departments will soon be completed. I was at Gettysburg recently with the Grand Army, and I noted some of the war [illegible] distinguished [illegible] I [illegible] a half dozen [illegible] were within the [illegible] of the [illegible] that its structure [illegible] and almost [illegible] of the United States.

This is the largest granite building in the world. It covers more ground than the [illegible] and it [illegible] two acres [illegible] It will cost when completed $10,000,000, and it will prefer as just as [illegible] It is made of immense [illegible] of gray granite, weighing all the way from a quarter of a ton to a ton [illegible] In one wing alone there are [illegible] of the big granite blocks, and [illegible] blocks in the whole structure [illegible] The floor space of the building, if spread out, would cover a twenty acre field, and it would make one of the large farms [illegible] in the country. The length of its corridors is more than two miles, and these corridors are so wide that a two horse wagon load of hay could be driven through them without grazing the walls on either side. The whole building contains a perfect network of pipes and flues which run through every part like the veins in the human body. If these pipes and flues could be stretched out they would extend as far as from Washington to Baltimore, and they would make a continuous line of over forty miles.

NEW STATE, NAVY AND WAR BUILDING.

Among the many rich men who will read this letter there is probably not one who has as many dollars as there are [illegible] in the interior construction of this big building, and if I could have the cost of half a [illegible] different rooms I should consider myself very well off. Each of the four main wings has two stairways, and the balustrade of each of [illegible] stairways cost $9,000. The rails are of the finest [illegible], and cost [illegible] $1 a foot, and the [illegible] which uphold them [illegible] the size of a baseball club. These eight stairways have cost $72,000 for their balustrades, and when you [illegible] in the [illegible] of the masonry they [illegible] probably more than this. The stairs of the north wing [illegible] cost $33,000, and its floors more than twice this [illegible] Its [illegible] work cost more than $1,000,000, and its roof more than $100,000. The plumbing and gas fitting of this wing equals as many dollars as there are soldiers in the United States army, and the bricks composing it cost $31,000.

* * *

The doors which enter the offices cost over $200 each. They are of South [illegible] mahogany, [illegible] by hand, the total cost of them must run into the hundreds of thousands, and it is im[possi]ble to describe the [illegible] of the iron and wood work which look down upon you from every side. The naval library of the east wing is made up entirely of [illegible] and stone, and its castings [illegible] the [illegible] of wood carvings. It has bronze [illegible] set into its walls, which are equal to anything the United States can show, and it is [illegible] up of marble [illegible] the Southern Alps, from France and Minnesota. Its floor is of Minton tiles.

* * *

This building is perfectly fireproof. It is made entirely of iron [illegible] with the exception of a skin of boards laid over the stone floors of the offices for the comfort of the clerks, the mahogany doors and the wooden stair rail spoken of above. The casings of the doors and windows are of iron, and the weight of the iron in the [illegible] is 2,000 tons [illegible] as that of 20,000 men of 200 pounds each. The roof is of iron and [illegible], and its water works are such that a stream of water could be [illegible] into any room at a moment's notice. Throughout the various corridors you see great coils of hose, with nozzles upon them, hung up on the wall, and the structure of the building is such that a fire in any one room could not be carried to others except by the doorway. The building is perhaps the most healthful habitation in Washington. Its ventilation is perfect and its walls inclose a network of air shafts of all sizes and of the latest invention. Before the work was commenced provisions were made for a complete system and it was known exactly where every flue, every gas pipe, every sewer pipe and every wire should go. The result is that none of these pipes or wires are visible, but they extend throughout the building under the floors and through the walls.

The wires are arranged so that a perfect system of communication can be kept up with the different parts of the structure. Secretary Whitney can touch a button and ring a bell which will call to him a man who is working perhaps a third of a mile away, and Secretary Endicott by a similar touch can stop the elevator so that he need not wait in the hall when he wishes to go to a lower floor. This system of communication is provided for nearly every one having clerks under him, or [illegible] amount of time is thus saved.

The heating is done by hot water, which Superintendent Snyder says is better than steam, and [illegible] equable temperature is kept up the year round. If the weather is a little damp, water at the temperature of [illegible] degs. is distributed throughout the building and the arrangements are such that the heat can be graduated to a degree. Speaking of the heating, the basement contains several steam engines, and under the courtyard there is a labyrinth of vaults for coal. Fifteen hundred tons can be stored here at once, and moving [illegible] through these vaults and the basement is like going through a great subterranean cavern.

This great building lies in the very heart of the capital. To the right is the White House, and facing it stands the Corcoran Art gallery, with its marble statues looking out at it from their niches in the walls. At its left lies what was once [illegible] fashionable part of Washington, and [illegible] at its western side you can see [illegible] house in which Col. John Tayloe, one of the millionaires of Madison's days, lived, and containing the room in which Madison signed the treaty of Ghent. [illegible] the wide Potomac with its [illegible] acres of reclaimed flats. Here also is Davy Burns' cottage, where lived the testy old Scotchman whose big farm was cut up to make this part of the city of Washington, and beside this is the Van Ness mansion, where Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr used to call to pay their compliments to the Scotchman's daughter, who had at this time married a [illegible] from New York. The whole [illegible] of this new building is historic, and its wonderful architecture [illegible] in striking contrast with the [illegible] about it.

It is of the Roman Doric [illegible], with a touch here and there of the French Mansard. It has four massive [illegible] of granite, and its roof is 135 feet above the ground. [illegible] from the river it vies with the Washington monument in its dignity. [illegible] by Davy Burns' cottage [illegible] of the department [illegible] plate glass eyes, and the [illegible] of each is crowned with the [illegible] of the United States. [illegible] which support the [illegible] You [illegible] with [illegible] and you feel as [illegible] the great [illegible] that may be [illegible] At the entrance of [illegible] Over the doors are carvings of flowers in stone, and at the [illegible] American eagle looks down upon you as you go in. Admiration [illegible] stand open on one side. [illegible] look down long corridors, from the center of the roof of which hangs a line of [illegible] each containing four [illegible] [illegible] thousands of clerks who are here carrying on the business of the government. Watchmen and messengers sit in chairs along the walls, and now and then an intellectual looking clerk moves quietly by with a bundle of papers in his hand. All the business pertaining to our army, our navy and to our diplomatic service is done here, and each of these rooms is full of enough interesting material to fill columns of this paper. In the state department I can show you the archives of the government, and when you have looked at the original constitution of the United States, or an almanac of Jefferson, with marginal notes, if you have a permit from Secretary Bayard you might be able to see letters which have come to Uncle Sam from every king and queen who has sat upon a throne since our organization as a government. In the navy department they can show you how ships are constructed, and how the nautical almanac, the biggest, I think, of its kind in the world, is made, and in the war department are the archives of the Confederacy and autograph papers concerning the wars and the soldiers of our history. This building, both architecturally and otherwise, will long continue to be one of the interesting structures of the United States.

ABOUT OUR GARMENTS.

What Men and Women Will Wear In-doors and Out.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—American women are better dressed than all the fair feminity across the water. The secret of it is they know how to wear their clothes. An observer says that the particular reason why American women achieve such magnificent success [illegible] is that their clothes are well made and they know how to put them on. And this is where English women of all ranks and classes make dead failures. It is even said that Miss Brady, though really beautiful, would not have been the great social figure that she was among the English aristocracy but for the perfection of her toilets, which were all from Worth. And then, the wearing of them. No lily born to its clothing of white beauty could be more simply and naturally fresh.

But then, eternal vigilance is the price of being well [illegible], faultlessly dressed. The details of a toilet require time and care and thought. There are ladies who are not willing to put in their lives in merely clothing their bodies. They can be dressed, neither carelessly nor faultlessly, and get on very well and have more time to put in more profitably.

It is what they call the "height of the season" at swell watering places. Newport has been having polo matches. There fine toilets were displayed. The piazzas of the club houses were crowded with fair women in fine toilets. What were the toilets? Some wore close fitting tailor made costumes [illegible] with very [illegible] hats. Some wore white, [illegible] with red in the way of ribbons and head wear. The business of outing—it is more of a business than a recreation—is doing something toward the picturesque. The young man in the tennis costume is a strong factor in this work. With his delicate and costly silk knickerbockers, his bright sash, and tennis racket over the shoulder, he gives a touch of the picturesque to any landscape. To be sure he is sometimes taken for a court fool by old [illegible] grandmothers, but even that [illegible] does not make him any the less an object worth looking at. [illegible] enhances his [illegible] Fools, like the poor, we have always with us, but court fools would be a novelty in our beloved republic.

Cloth costumes for fall are already being imported. [illegible] for early fall wear. [illegible] and two colors will be used, the lighter color for the lower skirt and vest, the darker for the basque and drapery. Some are plain and some have braiding on the vest and lower skirt. Serpent green and gray make a pretty combination. When an outdoor jacket is made with the suit it is of the same part as the basque and drapery. Plain and plaid cloths will be [illegible]

"Black gowns for street wear for early fall are often of wool, draped over skirts of black silk. The skirt should be entirely [illegible] trimming, but in pleats. For more dressy toilets the skirts may have stripes of color on a black ground. [illegible] total of black [illegible]

Women's clothes are becoming more [illegible] all the time, and it is a good thing [illegible] leans away from fussiness and [illegible] The felt hats for traveling wear for early fall are in the shape fashionable for men.

NAOMI FROST.

Alderwood and Gunpowder.

Alderwood has for centuries been used in the manufacture of gunpowder, and it is more necessary than to find copses of [illegible] of it alone, and these are most frequently placed in some low, lying spot where a little brook runs through the middle, and soft, rushy land lies on either side. "Dogwood," also, is in great request by the powder manufacturers, and Government [illegible] the best priced kind of alderwood grown. After the alder is [illegible] into neat lengths of three [illegible] by they are sent off to [illegible] or Waltham Abbey, the government mills, where they form the base of the destroying powder.—Good Words.

Interest in a Court [illegible]

OTTAWA, Ill., September 6.—The autumn session of the supreme court of the state began at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Owing to the fact that during the session the fate of the seven anarchists, who are now under death sentence, is to be decided, there is intense interest in the assembling of the court. The opinion and speculation here to-day as to the probable decision is in direct opposition to the generally accepted belief in Chicago. There the announcement made by the press that the decision of the lower court had been affirmed is universally credited. Here lawyers and others interested in the case believe that the defendants will be given a new trial. If the decision of the lower court in these cases, all in one, is affirmed, the law compels the court to deliver an oral as well as written opinion, and also to fix the day of execution of the prisoners. In this event the opinion will probably be very brief. If on the other hand the decision of Judge Gary's court is reversed, the opinion will be voluminous.

The representation will be one delegate to [illegible] hundred miners [illegible] Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia now [illegible] but [illegible] will be represented. A national executive board will be elected. The following changes have been recommended: The election of a national [illegible] with a salary sufficient to give his [illegible] attention and time to the [illegible] of the [illegible] the combination of [illegible] secretary and treasurer, increasing the national [illegible] per capita tax, which at present is one cent per [illegible] per month. The federation has [illegible] much in the three years of its existence. Where its influence has extended strikes have become obsolete. The price of coal has advanced, giving the operator a reward for his investment, and the miner a better compensation for his [illegible] The growth of the order is the growth of arbitration among the miners.

H. Duval's M[urderers]

WASHINGTON, September 6.—Information received at the department of state is to the effect that the United States representative at Piedre Negras has made a thorough investigation of the recent murder of H. Duval, an American citizen, at San Rosa. It is stated the Mexican authorities arrested the men implicated in the murder, and sentenced all to ten years' imprisonment. Pending decision upon an appeal from the sentence the prisoners have been to Monte Clara.

Ayoub Khan's F[light]

ST. PETERSBURG, September 6.—The flight of Ayoub Khan does not alter the relations existing between Russia and Afghanistan. The Afghan government had nothing to do with Ayoub's flight and does not feel called upon to [illegible] itself with internal complications. It is not likely that Ayoub's escape will create fresh difficulties between England and Russia, both of those governments when settling the Russo-Afghan frontier having adopted [illegible] basis, partially guided by Turcoman and Afghan traditions.

[illegible]

Hon. John Campbell has gone to Kiowa to attend the Elbert county court.

Rails have been laid on the Colorado Midland twenty miles beyond Leadville.

An undelivered telegram remains at the Western Union office for D. Talmage Mershon.

"Fitz-Mac" came down from Denver on the late train last night and registered at The Antlers.

Dr. Charles F. Gardiner yesterday filed with the county clerk his license to practice medicine and surgery.

City Engineer H. I. Reid returned to Cascade Canon yesterday to resume the work of surveying additions to the town.

Mr Joseph Pettigrew, an old settler and prominent ranchman near Gwillimville, visited the city yesterday with his wife.

Mr. V. E. Rouse returned yesterday from a trip to Missouri and will take charge of the Brosseville school in a few days.

Mr. W. I. Covert superintendent of the Colorado Coal & Iron Company's mines at Villa Grove is at the Grand View.

The Hook and Ladder company, at its meeting last night, appropriated the sum of $20 to the Fireman's band to aid them in purchasing uniforms.

Mr. C. C. Cobb of Lynn Mass., has arrived in the city with his wife and son and will make a lengthy sojourn. They were here several months early last season.

Mr Carl W. Miller a former employe of the Republic in this city is now running a paper called the Salt River Valley News at Tempe, Maricopa county, Arizona.

The reserved seat sale for the [illegible] night performance at the opera house begins this morning at Bell's drug store. Edward Harrigan will appear as "Old Lavender."

Arthur and Fred Summers departed yesterday for the east, the former to take a course of lectures at the Philadelphia Medical college, and the latter to enter a university in New York.

The finishing touches are being put on the new Odd Fellows hall in the third story of the Robertson block. Dedication services will take place on the evening of Tuesday the 13th inst.

The plumbers of this city are getting up a base ball nine among themselves, and have issued a verbal challenge to the clerks of the Colorado Midland offices to meet them in the field.

Mr J. A. Cochran of Colorado City yesterday filed his notarial commission with the county clerk. This is in accordance with a recently enacted law affecting notaries appointed since its existence.

Work on Mr. A. Q. Artz' new residence on the top of Institute heights is being pushed rapidly forward. The building is two stories high and will be complete and elegant in all its appointments. It will be an ornament to the heights.

The police court was remarkably quiet yesterday not a case being brought before it. There has been a perceptible falling off in police business of late very few cases having been tried during Aug. [illegible] compared with the several [illegible] the [illegible].

Mr T. C. Keefer, C. M. G., of Ottawa, Canada, president of the Canadian society of Civil Engineers, and vice president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, has arrived here from Winnipeg, Manitoba. He returns there next week and proceeds to the Pacific coast through Canada.

Captain Seth Baker is in receipt of a letter from the mother of J. F. Torrey, who was run over and killed in the Rio Grande yards recently. Her address was found on a letter in the pocket of the deceased. She gives vent to a mother's grief in the letter and says she had not seen her son for eight years.

It is now about decided to erect the new Sisters of St. Francis hospital on the hill east of the city, where it was a few months ago proposed to build the Jesuit college. Plans for the hospital are out and contractors are now at work on the specifications. Ground will probably be broken in a short time.

In the county court yesterday the case of Peter Baker vs Bacon & Carr was tried, Judge Cochran representing the plaintiff and Judge Fields appearing for the defendants. A verdict was rendered in favor of the defendants and the costs assessed to the plaintiff. The court then adjourned till Monday, the 12th inst.

Colfax canton No. 3, I. O. O. F., is now holding two meetings each week, drilling and preparing to participate in the grand encampment in Denver this month. Thirty uniformed members from this lodge will be in attendance and the order will run an excursion to Denver on the 22d inst., the day on which the grand parade will take place.

The county commissioners adjourned yesterday to the October term. During their session they ordered repairs made on the Mesa and Templeton's Gap roads and on several other county thoroughfares. George Howard, of Manitou Park, was appointed road overseer in District No 11, the bonds of a number of butchers were approved, and several other matters of minor importance were transacted.

Miss Blanche Welden, of Illinois, who has been visiting in this city during the past four weeks, departed yesterday for San Jose, Cala., where her sister, Mrs. Frank Campbell, and family reside. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell lived for several years in Colorado Springs. Their son Guy, who many people will remember as a school boy here a few years ago, is now superintendent of an agricultural implement works in San Jose.

Freight Agent S. N. Nye, of the Colorado Midland, returned yesterday morning from Fountainville, where he went to collect a [illegible] of native grasses for the Midland exhibit at the Denver exposition. Rev. A. J. M. Hudson, an elderly gentleman living on a ranch near Fountainville, has accumulated within the last four years perhaps the finest collection of native grasses in the country. He has over fifty varieties, all gathered from one ranch, and Mr. Nye secured specimens of thirty-five of them. They are beauties and many of them quite rare. They will add greatly to the display of Colorado products at the exposition.

Next Saturday night opens the fall and winter season at the opera house. During the summer intermission the house has undergone thorough repairs and many improvements. In speaking of the play which will be produced on the opening night, the New York Tribune says: "Old Lavender" abounds in jolly music and quaint phrases, in the catching fun and the lively passages which have done so much for the success of Mr Harrigan's local plays. It has the pathos as well, and the picture which the author-actor gives us of the warm hearted whole souled boon companion brought by the wrong doing of others to the clutch of severest poverty and distress, touches the source of tears, though the cheery manner in which he bears misfortune and the grotesque way he has of putting his moralizing go to the springs of laughter. Few men on the stage could play such a part as Edward Harrigan plays this with a finish, a sympathy, a delicacy that are admirable.

Bargains in Shoes.

Owing to the small size of his store GAY has got to sell a few pair of SHOES before Fall and, to facilitate matters, will make

PRICES VERY LOW.

First, he will give 10 per cent off on Regular goods.
Second, he will sell a good Kid Button for $2, and there isn't a particle of shoddy in it, either.
A good grain Button for $1.55, and no shoddy. Slippers at cost. Mens' Brogans from $1 up. Mens' Kip Boots $2. Tennis Shoes less than cost. Everything good and prices low.

Know all Men by These Presents.

It has come to our knowledge that because of our enormous sales of Wall Paper that a number of our competitors in order to make a sale have resorted to cutting the price below the standard rate. Now, be it known, that we will not be undersold by anyone in our line and from henceforth we shall sell Plain Wall Paper for 20c per double roll. Gilts for 30c per double roll and upward. All other grades in like proportion. It will pay you to come and see us, and we shall take pleasure in showing you these Papers whether you buy or not.

We also have for sale the very best brands of White Lead, Oils and Varnishes, Brushes, Glass and Putty.
